Eliza Carson reenactment (Laurie Schaefer)

What would it have been like to go to school if you had lived in Ohio in the early 1800's?

This program will give students a chance to write on slates with chalk, look through authentic McGuffey Readers, learn to read from a hornbook, or play a game from “nooning” (recess today). Learn a lesson the way it was taught in the 1800's. Meet Eliza Carson, the first licensed female teacher in Delaware County. Eliza describes what life and learning in a one-room school was like through artifacts and stories, some told by her great-great-great grandson, Brent Carson. Students are given the opportunity to imagine they have stepped back in time to a school day in the 1800s and compare school life now and then.
